Preservation by Record of Ringfort Complete at West's Waterford Manufacturing Site

Waterford, Ireland — August 27, 2015 – West Pharmaceutical Services, Inc. (NYSE: WST), a global leader in innovative packaging components and drug delivery systems, announced the completion of a 90-day archeology project to preserve by record a ringfort located at the site of the company's new pharmaceutical component manufacturing facility in Waterford, Ireland.

West is building a 95,000 square foot (approximately 8,800 square meters) facility that will be situated at a 44-acre strategic industrial site at Knockhouse on Old Kilmeaden Road in Waterford. The ringfort is located on part of the land owned by West, but that land is not part of the current construction of the plant. Now that the archaeology process is complete, the company will await a report from the archaeology team, which is required by the National Monuments Service, and will consult with the Waterford City and County Council on future planning associated with this parcel of the land.

The process of preservation by record was carried out by a team of professional archeologists, on behalf of West and in partnership with the Waterford City and County Council. The National Monuments Service provided a license for the work, and monitored the project throughout its duration. West is happy to know that findings from this project will contribute to the public's knowledge and appreciation of Waterford's archaeological heritage.

The new West facility will produce packaging components for insulin injector cartridges and other high-value packaging components, in order to meet growing demand from pharmaceutical and biotech customers. Once operational in 2018, this new site is expected to bring approximately 150 new jobs to Waterford and is intended to grow to support as many as 250-300 additional jobs through future expansions.
